Dear Eirian,

I am writing to you in response to your letter dated 30 October regarding establishing St David's Day as a bank holiday in Wales. I would like to sincerely apologise for the delay in responding.

You will already know about our long-standing ambition for St David's Day to be a public holiday in Wales. We share your desire for Wales to celebrate our national day as Scotland and Northern Ireland do, and we remain committed to trying to ensure that the relevant power is devolved in order to enable us to achieve this. We are continuing discussions with the UK Government.

Yours sincerely,

Eluned Morgan
